“What’s Up Next”: A Webinar for Parents

On the first three Monday evenings of April, Cameron Cole and Rebecca Lankford will offer a seminar to help parents prepare for adolescence before their kids are teenagers. Each session will take place via the Zoom video app at 8:00 p.m. The first session on April 6 is “Busyness: The Over-Scheduling of Teenagers.” Links will be accessible via social media and AdventBirmingham.org.

A Word from Canon Hicks

Throughout this ordeal, I’ve been thinking a lot about the necessary physicality of our faith in the midst of all our disembodied connection – livestreamed services, Zoom meetings, FaceTime, social media. I’ve felt a tension in the pastoral decisions I and others are making with regards to all this.

Early on in the church’s life, not long after Jesus ascended into heaven, Christians were confronted with the physicality of faith. There were some, the Gnostics, who argued that the spiritual was all that mattered, that the physical life was just a husk to shed on the path to becoming our true, best, non-physical selves. Christians reflected on this and ultimately labeled it heresy. What was the deciding factor? It was the doctrine of Christ. It was that Jesus became incarnate. Once God took on flesh, he put his eternal stamp of validation on what he’d already made pretty clear at creation: the whole human being (body included) was “very good” (Genesis 1:31).

And Jesus stretched out his hand and touched him, saying, “I will; be clean.” And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

- Matthew 8:3

This all means that bodies matter. Physical connections matter.

It got me thinking all the more, in this time, how important it is – even amidst all the necessary distancing and precautions required – to touch people and to be in one another’s physical presence. Certainly we can’t do everything we once could for the time being. But I’ve made it a habit in these days to pay a bit more attention to the physical when I’m with the people I know and love – eye contact, a hand on the shoulder, a hug, a leaning in. I do think that there’s an impoverishment, a specific kind of aloneness, that can settle in when we’re all connecting in disembodied ways. I think of Jesus who didn’t shrink back from a leper, and not only healed him with his words, but “touched him” (Matthew 8:3).

Love through touch – physical, embodied love – is deeply human, and deeply Christian. I’m thinking about the people who are quarantined alone, who grow needier by the day for this kind of Christian love. Join me in praying for them. Maybe God, in this time, is calling some of us to transcend a few of these barriers.

- Zac

This Sunday: April 5, 2020

We again will worship via livestream this Sunday, April 5, as we continue not gathering at the church. Please join us for Palm Sunday worship at 9:00 a.m., when Mark Gignilliat will preach. The Dean’s Class will follow immediately afterward. Visit AdventBirmingham.org/Live, Facebook Live, or Twitter to access our livestream.

Adult Education: 10:10 - 10:50 a.m.

The Dean’s Class will be available via livestream this Sunday. Visit AdventBirmingham.org/Live.

Recordings of past classes are available on our website at AdventBirmingham.org/Audio.

Lectionary:

Matthew 21:1-11; Psalm 118:1-2, 19-29
Psalm 31:9-16; Isaiah 50:4-9a
Philippians 2:5-11; Matthew 26:14-27:66

Children’s & Youth Education:

Two resources are now available for families with children. Family Sunday School lessons are posted online every week, and the Advent Christian Academy offers 30-minute lesson plans that align with the Advent’s newly released Bible Benchmarks curriculum. Junior and Senior High Youth will gather every Sunday via Zoom for Christian education. Links to all may be found online at AdventBirmingham.org/Coronavirus.

*The 9:00 a.m. service is broadcast live on AdventBirmingham.org/Live.
Sermon and class recordings are available at AdventBirmingham.org.*
